Rafał Taubenschlag

"Parerga, note papirologiche ed epigrafiche", V. Arangio Ruiz, Napoli 1945 : [recenzja]

The Journal of Juristic Papyrology 3, 162-163

1949

Artykuł został zdigitalizowany i opracowany do udostępnienia w internecie przez Muzeum Historii Polski w ramach prac podejmowanych na rzecz zapewnienia otwartego, powszechnego i trwałego dostępu do polskiego dorobku naukowego i kulturalnego. Artykuł jest umieszczony w kolekcji cyfrowej bazhum.muzhp.pl, gromadzącej zawartość polskich czasopism humanistycznych i społecznych.

Tekst jest udostępniony do wykorzystania w ramach dozwolonego użytku.
A. P. CHRISTOPHILOPOULOS, ὁδέπω ὤν τῶν ἑτῶν (Ἀνατόμωσις ἐκ τοῦ ἀφιερώματος εἰς Κονσταντίνον ὁ Ακαντός, Athens 1940).

In this article the author combats my opinion in Sav. Z. 37,195 that ὁδέπω ὤν τῶν ἑτῶν determines infantes under seven years and asserts that this phrase means the same as ὤν ἐν ἡλικίᾳ = minor (cf. my Law I 11166).

Uncles are the commonest guardians in all ages and their perfidy is a typical example of human wickedness. Among them who suspected them most were, according to our traditions, the ancient law givers of Greece; for guardianship and the connected subject of second marriages occupy quite a noticeable place in the scanty records of both legislators Solon (Diogenes Laertius I 56) and Charondas (Diodorus XII 15). After having examined the traditional sources and the papyri, the author comes to the conclusion that the evil reputation of guardians was not justified by the facts known to us as far as any menace to the life of the ward is concerned. We find in Athens as well in the papyri that — though guardians are often accused of dishonesty and rapacity — charges of personal illtreatment hardly occur. The alleged principles of Charondas find little support in the law and legal practice of Greece and Egypt. We have no real evidence that either step-mothers or guardians were practically evil and especially there is no evidence that guardians were in the habit of attempting to murder their wards, whenever this appeared to be in their own interest. But only on such an assumption is the rule attributed to Charondas really justified and the assumption belongs to literature not to life.

The most ancient known instance of a Roman donatio ante nuptias was until recently a rescript of Antoninus Pius in D 6, 2, 12 pr. Our document proves the existence of this Roman custom nearly half a century earlier (about 100 A.D.).

V. ARANGIO RUIZ, Parerga, note papirologiche ed epigrafiche (Napoli 1945).
In Parergon I p. 1—7 under the title Sul P. Lips. Inv. N° 136 the author gives a new lecture of this papyrus. In Parergon II p. 7—10 Sul P. Oxy. VIII, 1114 the author gives a new lecture of v. 9 ff: prof[iteor obvenisse] (instead of adnuisse) filiabus meis... h[er]editatem seu bonorum possessionem... matris earum. In Parergon IV p. 18 ff II p. Oxy X 1264 e l’ ἐναιδεία the author asserts that the lecture: τα δπόντα (?) της ἐναιδείας (?) δίκαια (instead of that corrected by the editors: ἐναιδείας) is right; in order not to repeat the term ἐναιδία the writer had to take refuge to another synonym ἀτέλεια or ἀλείτουργία (?) or ἀδεία. If therefore he made use of a strange term ἐναιδεία, it means that this term sounded in his years, rightly or wrongly as a synonym of ἐναιδία. Parergon V p. 24 ff Sul P. Michigan inv. 4703 where rejecting the hypotheses of Sanders and Wenger, he affirms that the papyrus deals with the restitution of the dos giving the title of the document as Conventio de dote post solutum matrimonium. He supposes that the divorce was a fictitious one and p. 38 that we can consider the document in question as a fiction intended to regulate for the time being in a friendly way the economic situation of the parties and to avoid in the future the rejection of the pretensions of the widow and the orphans, a rejection the severity of which we noticed in the P. Cattavi. Parergon VI A proposito del P. Hamb. 70 (p. 39—55): Rejecting the interpretation given to the document by Solazzi that the legacy could not be disposed of otherwise than per damnationem the author asserts, that there is no hindrance to adopt the form per vindicationem. He rejects also Solazzi’s interpretation that in case of a legacy per damnationem the παραχώρησις could not be performed with the auctoritas of the contutor Sarapion only (p. 40, 48).

The first essay deals with P. Mich. Inv. N° 508 + 2217. The parties are Romans and there is no doubt, that the document concerns the attestation of a justum matrimonium. The father gives her daughter, under his patria potestas, in marriage secundum