R. TAUBENSCHLAG, Il diritto provinciale romano nel libro siro-romano (Istituto di studi romani, Atti del V Congresso nazionale di studi romani vol. V (1946) p. 84—97).

The author asserts that the liber syro-romanus was a school-book containing the law which at the time of its compilation was in force in the Roman province of Syria. He explains the character of this provincial Roman Law and shows that it was composed of different elements, taken from the native Law of the province. In this essay the author makes use of the papyrological literature and publications cf. p. 93 note 85; 95 note 109, 110 etc.

F. de VISSCHER, Le statut juridique des nouveaux citoyens romains et l'inscription de Rhosos, (Extrait de l'Antiquité Classique, Bruxelles 1946).

After an introduction the author investigates in Chap. I the incompatibility of two citizenships and finds out that this principle refers in the Republican period to the Roman citizens in Italy. After that he deals with the inscription from Rhosos and points out that the principle of incompatibility of two citizenships does not apply to the citizens of provincial origin and that this inscription shows
