out in 296. The Hellenism of the citizens was indeed becoming more and more nominal and in the course of the Byzantine age the city lost its special position and was merged in the general mass of Egyptian municipalities.

C. B. WELLES, The Greeks in Egypt. American Journal of Archaeology XLIII (1942), p. 308.

The author discusses the role of the Greeks in Egypt and asserts that it did not vary essentially from the eighth to the second cent. B.C.

S. NAZZARINO, Note Constantiniane. Aeg. XX (1940), p. 294ff.

The author shows that in Strassb. 129 Schwarz's and Bilabel's lecture in I.4 has to be corrected in Ἀγούσ[του] τε [κ]αὶ Καισάρων on the basis of Oxy. XIV, 1716. The consul in 333 was therefore not Delmatius I, but Delmatius II.

A. SEGRÉ, Il diritto dei militari peregrini nell' esercito romano. Rendiconti della Pont. Accademia Romana di Archeologia, vol. XVII (1940-1941), p. 167-182.

This is a collection of articles referring to the law of peregrin soldiers in the Roman army. The first chapter which deals with P. Yale, Inv. nr. 1528, and P. Fouad 21 was published contemporarily in The Journal of Roman Studies XXX (1940), p. 153ff. mentioned below. The further sections are concerned with the rights of veterans according to the different kinds of missiones (some brief remarks on P. Fouad cit., BGU. I 113 and PSI. 1026), the patria potestas dei veterani, with some details as to the soldiers' succession and with the fiction of citizenship in favor of soldiers and their children. In an Appendix the author explains his distinction between Aurelii and Romani, formerly presented in the paper Note sull' Editto di Caracalla, in the same Rendiconti, vol. XVI (1940) p. 194.

R. S. ROGERS, The prefects of Egypt under Tiberius. American Philological Association LXXII (1941), p. 365.

The author corrects the list of prefects by Reinmuth and makes up a new list of prefects under Tiberius.

A. STEIN, Die Praefecten von Ägypten unter Commodus. Aegyptus XIX (1939), p. 215ff.

The author corrects the list of prefects by Cantarelli and makes up a new list of prefects under Commodus.
