sation-pledge, established by agreement (with rare exceptions) neither a forfeiture pledge. Accordingly to its cautionary character it lets untouched the liabilities of the debtor resulting from the u'iltu and even the liability of the sureties, as accessory liabilities. In this way the Babylonian and Assyrian laws in their last epoch developed, in contrast with the old cuneiform law, into a quite modern institution. It is noteworthy because the ancient Greek and Greco-Egyptian hypothec was considered as a forfeiture pledge or as a compensative pledge not accompanied by the personal responsibility of the debtor. It is not possible to establish when the development toward the cautionary pledge was accomplished.

Treating of the antichresis (p. 117) the author takes the papyri Lond. III 1168 and Dura 10 into account.

This article deals with the question of the relationship between the neighbours concerning the property of the boundary-wall. Generally, the boundary-wall was subject to joint-property of the neighbours, but in the Byzantine period this wall could be owned exclusively by one of them. In other cases the servitus oneris ferendi on the neighbouring lot could be constituted.
