

AUTHORS

Javier J. Amores is an Assistant Professor at the Faculty of Communications of the Pontifical Catholic University of Chile and a researcher at the Observatory of Audiovisual Content at the University of Salamanca. He holds a PhD in Communication Sciences with an International Doctorate distinction and an Extraordinary Doctorate Award. His research focuses on media and social networks, disinformation, hate speech, media effects, and computational methods applied to the social sciences. E-mail: jamores@uc.cl

Carlos Arcila Calderón is a Professor of the Department of Sociology and Communication at the University of Salamanca (Spain). Member of the Audiovisual Content Observatory (OCA). Editor of the Electronic Yearbook of Social Communication Studies 'Dissertations'. European Doctorate in 'Communication, Social Change and Development' from the Complutense University of Madrid. Master's degree in data science and Master's Degree in Journalism, both from the Universidad Rey Juan Carlos (URJC). E-mail: carcila@usal.es

Boris Badurina, PhD, is a Full Professor at the Department of Information Sciences, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Josip Juraj Strossmayer University of Osijek, Croatia. His research is mainly focused on digital media, human–technology interaction, and the societal impact of digital transformation. E-mail: boris.badurina@ffos.hr

Xabier Barandiaran Irastorza holds a PhD in Sociology from the University of Deusto and is a senior lecturer in the Department of Social and Human Sciences at the same university. He is specialized on collaborative governance and democracy. Last titles: Building collaborative governance in times of uncertainty (co-edited), Leuven UP. Email: xabier.barandiaran@deusto.es

Andrian Curiš holds a Bachelor's degree in Communication Studies, Media and Journalism from University North, Croatia. He works as a journalist for the student media outlet Polaris. His academic and professional interests include visual communication, digital media, and contemporary journalistic practices. E-mail: ancuris@unin.hr

Maria del Mar Grandio is a Professor at the Faculty of Documentation and Communication at the University of Murcia. She teaches 'Organisation of Audiovisual and Multimedia Production', 'Audiovisual and Multimedia Fiction' and 'Narrative and Transmedia Projects'. She holds a degree and a PhD in Communication from the University of Navarra. Her research focuses on media literacy and digital well-being. E-mail: mgrandio@um.es

Branimir Felger is an Assistant Professor at the Department of Media, Communication Studies and Journalism, University North, Koprivnica, Croatia. His research interests focus on television journalism and media literacy in the contemporary digital environment. He is actively involved in media education projects and in research on communication skills in digital environments. E-mail: bfelger@unin.hr

Pilar Garrido holds a PhD in Arabic Philology from the University of Salamanca and is a Lecturer in Arabic and Islamic Studies at the University of Murcia's Faculty of Arts. She has been researching and teaching in this field since 2007/08. She has also taught at the Federal University of Juiz de Fora (Brazil), the University of Yarmuk (Irbid, Jordan), Muhammad V in Rabat and Seville (US). E-mail: pilargarrido@um.es

Georgia Gioltzidou is a Doctor of Journalism and Political Communication from the Department of Journalism and Mass Media at the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Greece. She is an Adjunct Lecturer at the Hellenic Open University and has completed her postdoctoral research at the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, funded by the Hellenic Foundation for Research and Innovation (H.F.R.I.). Her research interests focus on journalism, political communication, social media, digital media, and media literacy, with particular emphasis on political communication through social media in times of crisis. Email: gioltzidou@gmail.com

Foteini Gioltzidou is a PhD candidate at the Department of Journalism and Mass Media at the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Greece. Her research focuses on a comparative, intercontinental study of university journalism curricula, based on the media system models developed by Hallin and Mancini, and their relationship to journalistic practices across different countries. Her academic interests include journalism education, comparative media systems, journalism studies, and journalistic cultures. She is a professional journalist with more than 25 years of experience. Email: gioltzidoufotini@gmail.com

William González-Baquero is a predoctoral researcher and PhD candidate at the Department of Sociology and Communication at the University of Salamanca, and a member of the Observatory for Audiovisual Contents (OCA). He holds master's degrees in Data Science Applied to the Social Sciences and Audiovisual Communication, as well as a bachelor's degree in Psychology from the Catholic University of Colombia.

E-mail: willgb@usal.es

María José Canel Crespo is a Professor in Political and Public Sector Communication at the University Complutense of Madrid. She has published widely on government communication and intangible resources in the public sector. Last titles: Public Sector Communication. Closing gaps between citizens and organizations (co-authored, Wiley Blackwell, 2019), and Handbook of Public Sector Communication (co-edited, Wiley Blackwell, 2020). E-mail: mjcanel@ucm.es

Juraj Jurlina, PhD, is a Senior Research and Teaching Assistant at the Department of Sociology, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Josip Juraj Strossmayer University of Osijek, Croatia. His research interests include mediatization, individualization, modernization theories, digital communication, and the social impact of online media and technologies. E-mail: jjurlina@ffos.hr

Jim Macnamara AM, PhD, is a Distinguished Professor of Public Communication at the University of Technology Sydney (UTS). He is an internationally recognized researcher in the evaluation of public communication and organizational listening. In 2026 he was made a Member of the Order of Australia (AM) for his service to tertiary education and communication research. jim.macnamara@uts.edu.au

Ion Muñoa Errasti holds a degree in Humanities and Communication and a PhD in Social Sciences from the University of Deusto. He also has a master's degree in Strategic and Institutional Communication. He is specialized on strategic communication and democracy. Email: Ion.munoa@deusto.es

Željko Pavić, PhD, is a Full Professor at the Department of Sociology, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Josip Juraj Strossmayer University of Osijek, Croatia. His research examines how digital and traditional media shape public opinion, political behavior, and attitudes towards science and health. E-mail: zpavic@ffos.hr

Pedro Rojo graduated in Arabic Philology and Islam and holds a master's degree in international relations. Since 2012, he has chaired the Al Fanar Foundation for Arab Knowledge. He has lived in Egypt, Syria, Morocco and Jordan, and has curated exhibitions of Arab comics and caricatures, including Sendas del cómic español. He coordinates the project Kif-kif, comics for inclusion, and the Observatory of Islamophobia in the Media. He collaborates with the media and has published books and articles on the Arab world. E-mail: pedro.rojo@fundacionalfanar.org

Hedviga Tkáčová, PhD, teaches at the Faculty of Arts and Letters in Ružomberok, Slovakia, and occasionally at the Universities of the Third Age at University in Zilina and at Comenius University in Bratislava. She received her doctorate in Journalism. Her research interests include academic education, cultural diversity education, and manipulation through the media. E-mail: hedwigatkacova@gmail.com

Marta Więckiewicz-Archacka is an Assistant Professor at the Institute of Journalism and Social Communication at the University of Warmia and Mazury in Olsztyn, Poland. Her research interests focus on the evolution of journalism under the influence of new media. She is involved in media education activities to raise awareness of disinformation. E-mail: marta.wieckiewicz@uwm.edu.pl

Rocío Zamora is a Professor at the University of Murcia, with a specialization in the analysis and study of political communication and innovative digital campaigns, with a particular focus on visual communication. Her academic and professional experience includes international research and collaborations, which have established her as a recognized expert in her field. Furthermore, she has considerable experience in the field of politics and digital media. E-mail: rzamoramedina@um.es