Policy against ghostwriting and guest authorship

In order to ensure high scientific quality and reliability of articles published in “Hereditas Monasteriorum”, the Editorial Board – in compliance with the guidelines provided by the Ministry of Science and Higher Education – pursues a policy against practices known as ghostwriting and *guest authorship*¹.

Authors of manuscripts are obliged to present their research findings transparently, diligently and honestly, and bear full responsibility by signing them with their name, surname and affiliation, which is tantamount to confirming that they personally participated in the creation of an article.

If a paper was written in collaboration with other persons, the authors are obliged to disclose their participation as authors/co-authors, or to list them in the acknowledgements and specify their affiliations and contribution.

If a paper was written within a research project, the authors are obliged to disclose the funding sources for the article, the contribution of research institutions, associations and other entities (financial disclosure).

All detected instances of scientific misconduct and violations of ethical scholarly standards will be minutely documented and exposed to the public by the Editorial Board of “Hereditas Monasteriorum”. Moreover, appropriate institutions employing authors who resort to illegal research practices will be notified of the misconduct.

1 Ghostwriting refers to a situation in which someone contributed to a publication without disclosing his or her participation as an author/co-author, or has not been listed in the acknowledgements section. We are dealing with guest authorship (or honorary authorship), in turn, when the contribution of a person specified as an author/co-author of a publication is extremely limited or non-existent.
