changed however, by the mingling of Europe and Asia in the Hellenistic period. For the jurists the pages dealing with the political and administrative organization of Ptolemaic (41—53), Roman (65—86) and Byzantine Egypt (120 ff) will be the most interesting ones. The bibliography added after the notes will be very useful not only to the non-specialist reader.

R. TAUBENSCHLAG, The Law in Greco-Roman Egypt II, Political and Administrative Law, Warsaw (1948).

The second volume consists of two parts, devoted to constitutional and administrative law.

The first part — the constitutional law — consists of four chapters: I The Ptolemaic monarchy and the Roman empire; II The autonomous cities and the χώρα; III Citizens and non citizens; IV The fundamental rights and duties of citizens and non citizens.

The second part — administrative law — consists also of four chapters: I Control of individuals and their material and intellectual interests (regulations concerning birth notifications, names, buildings, alimentation, sanitation, education, passports, death notifications); II Control of corporate bodies (regulations concerning temples and priests, and associations); III Control of economics (A. Primary production: agriculture, trees and bushes, hunting, fishing, salt; B. Industry and trade: oil industry, beer industry, ointments, textiles, papyrus-production; C. Currency and banking; D. Shipping and postal service); IV Administrative proceedings and execution.
