The author asserts in a convincing way that the abuse against which Capito's edict was directed was in reality the soldiers' and officials' fraudulent practices in the expenditures of state funds for their personal convenience when travelling — that the issue here, in other words, is not extortion but the padding of expense accounts not milking the populace but bilking the fisc.

Following W. Uxkull-Gyllenband the author investigates § 3 of the edict of Tiberius Alexander and suggests, a partly new explanation of the abuses committed in connection with the πρωτοπραξία as of the measure in order to avoid such abuses in future.

The author considers the βασιλικὸς νόμος as a "royal law" which was still in force in the epoch of Hadrian (see on the survival of the royal legislation in Egypt in the Roman period, Bingen, L'Antiq. Class. XXIV [1955] fasc. 1, p. 255 ff.).

The author tries to prove that about 60 Greek and Roman edicts contained in the book of Maccabees and Flav. Joseph, Antiq. concerning the Jews, are authentic.
