E. Seidl, Die Jurisprudenz der Statthalter Aegyptens in der Prinzipatszeit (estr. da Studi in on. di U.E. Paoli, Firenze 1955).

In this study the author deals with the question which were the methods adopted by the judges of Egypt when passing their sentences. He reviews the texts in their chronological order after the governors in whose names the preserved verdicts were passed. He also reminds that the verdicts were always issued by a consilium so that the authorship of a verdict could as well be ascribed to the governor himself as to an anonymous jurist belonging to his attendance.

E. Seidl, Zum juristischen Wortschatz der alten Aegypter (Festschr. F. Dornseiff [1953] 320—329).

In Ermann-Gradow, The Egyptian Language is given a lexicon and its vol. IV contains a collection of words following their meaning and practice. One column deals with "law", the other with "earning, propriety and loss".

The author reviews several legal terms such as: agency, administrator, guardian, ownership and possession, purchase, expressions for gratuitous deeds, corn-loan, lease, mandate, fulfillment of a contract, annulment of a contract, several terms from the sphere of the law of inheritance, the law of matrimony and the penal law.

D. Cohen, Schets van het notariaat in het oude Egypte (Ars notarius V) (Amsterdam 1955).

The book is divided into five parts: I. treats of the history of Egypt, II. of acts, III. of the office of a notary and the notarial acts, IV. of keeping and registration of the acts. The final part V gives examples of acts.
