phrase in turn seems to have been coined under Roman influence (cf. on Eisern-Vieh in the papyri my Law<sup>2</sup> 369 ff.).

A. Calderini, Contratti di lavoro di XX secoli fa (estr. da Stud. Romani, II (No. 6) [1954] 649—662).

The author examines the contractus operis from the I cent. A.D. and especially those conserved in the papyri such as Fay. 41; Stud. Pal. XXII, 35; Strassb. 40; Mich. III 170—172; Osl. III 141; BGU IV 1108; SB III 6946; Oxy. I 138.

T. Reekmans, Over den Loonarbeid in Vroeg-Ptolemaeïsch Egypte (Mededelingen van de Koninklijke Vlaamse Academie voor Wetenschappen, Letteren en schone Kunsten van België, Kl. d. Lett. Jaarg. XV [1953] No. 5).

The central subjects of this essay are: the great extension of hired labour in comparison with independent and slave labour; the preponderance of seasonal work and jobbing over permanent work; the frequent occurrence of technical difficulties and the irregularities of attendance both of which affected the output of hired labour; the extremely favourable bargaining position of the employers of unskilled workers, which gave rise to low wages, payments in kind, piece rates, payments for long terms, postpayments, deductions and infractions of the agreement; wages; the great uniformity of unskilled wages in all trades, all seasons, all nomes (in some respect) at least all periods.

Among the cases of aforementioned facts the author mentions: the poverty of the population, the important degree of juridical (not economical) freedom in the choice of a trade or profession; the absence of labour legislation; the restricted bearing of the liturgical system on the labour market; the insufficiency of the capital provided by Egyptian (and foreign) capitalists, owing to their lack of confidence in the country's economic activity; the qualitative instability and quantitative stability of the demand for unskilled labour, its periodical changes and geographical diversity; the partial monopoly of the demand for labour.

The author discusses only a few results of the conditions of hired labour in early Ptolemaic Egypt; the great extension of female and child labour; the frequent occurrence of emergency loans;
